

Spring Clean Your Life and Go Green

More and more of us are quite happy to switch and save when it comes to utilities and everyday providers, but how many of us think about how green those companies are?

Check out the Ethical Consumer website and look at ways you can do things differently such as:-

Bank sustainably

Switching bank accounts to one such as Triodos, Monzo or Co-Op who unlike many other banks, don't fund fossil fuels, tobacco, fast-fashion or weapons, and ammunition.

Switch to a Renewable Energy Supplier

Switching to green energy is one of the easiest and most impactful things you can do to reduce your carbon footprint. Big Clean Switch is a free energy comparison service, to compare deals from the UK's best green energy suppliers. They also verify the claims of all the companies that they work with to ensure that they're greenwash-free and the real deal when it comes to sustainability.

SSDC are supporting the 2020 Government Local Electricity Bill and will be aiming to purchase our energy from local renewable generators.

Use a green search engine

Not all search engines are the same. Check out which ones plant trees or donate to environmental charities every time you search online.

The SSDC Environment team likes to use Ecosia to help fund global tree planting.
